Emergency Vehicle Operations Course

Please preregister for this class at (McNeil link to classes) or call (800) 822-3747 x176.

Accidents involving apparatus responding to or returning from calls continues to be major contributor of death to fire and EMS personnel. Unfortunately, the damage and destruction of an accident is only the beginning of the problems that will face an organization. Accidents are costly not only to human life and equipment, but to the health of the organization as well. The negative impact on public relations, lost services and legal actions can last for years.

This course is offered to better prepare emergency vehicle drivers with the extra demands placed upon them while operating emergency vehicles. The class is designed to be interactive for the students and offers hands on driver training along with classroom activities. This program will lead participants through various scenarios that will force them to think about typical accidents and make proper decisions when reacting to them.
